Community colleges receive $1.4 million grant to improve job training

A coalition of community colleges in San Diego and Imperial counties has received a $1.4 million grant to better prepare students -- beginning at the middle school level -- for the hottest jobs of the future.

The three-year state Career Pathways grant will focus on providing training for job sectors determined to have the most growth in the region for the coming years. Money from the grant will also be used to align the training and education programs among community colleges and the middle and high schools so that all of the programs are teaching the skills that students most need to learn for the emerging jobs.

The region is uniquely qualified to establish the program because all of the nine community colleges in the two counties are members of the San Diego and Imperial County Community College Association (SDICCCA), a coalition that has existed for 50 years to work together to better serve the area's 150,000 community college students.

The California Community College Chancellor's Office challenged community colleges throughout the state to determine which workforce sectors will show the most growth and have the greatest need for more trained workers. The regional consortium for San Diego and Imperial counties determined that they should focus on training for jobs in transportation and renewables, health, and biotech, along with advanced manufacturing and information communications technology/digital media.

The grant will also be used for the community colleges to collaborate with each other and the middle and high schools in the region to ensure they're all teaching students the same lessons. Currently, a student interested in a field such as health care might find that what they were taught in middle or high school has a different focus than what their community college classes offer.

"It's to help provide a smoother transition for students from high school to college," said Mary Wylie, a retired Southwestern College dean who is serving as chair of the Regional Consortium for the San Diego-Imperial County region.

Community colleges will also be working together to align the programs and training they offer to students preparing for jobs. For example, biotech classes offered at all of the colleges would offer the same lessons and skills so students could easily transfer from one college to another without falling behind, Wylie said.

Wylie said representatives from the community colleges will also be meeting with businesses in the region to learn more about the training needs for their workforce. A regional committee will ensure the colleges are offering the same kind of programs that companies need, she said.

"Businesses just want us to send them good employees," she said.

Grossmont College President Sunita V. Cooke has been working to help SDICCCA obtain the state grant, and is also serving on a statewide advisory board to help other regions create similar workforce training programs. The Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College District is also responsible for administering the grant funds.

Cooke said the Career Pathways program is one of the many ways that community colleges in the region are working together to serve students and employers.

"Our goals are always to find new and innovative ways to help our students succeed, find good jobs, and to provide excellent employees for the workforce," Cooke said.

Cox Communications scholarships

Cox Communications is offering $110,000 in college scholarships to San Diego County, Orange County, Palos Verdes and Santa Barbara-area college-bound students through its Cox Cares Foundation.

Cox Scholars scholarships ranging from $1,000 to $5,000 will be awarded to graduating high school seniors who live in a Cox service area and dream of furthering their education.

Graduating high school seniors must file their application by Monday, Feb. 3. Winners will be notified in June. Recipients will be chosen based on their scholastic achievement, community involvement, extracurricular activities, and work experience while demonstrating the perseverance to overcome life's challenges.

The Cox Cares Foundation is a fund of the San Diego Foundation, which administers the scholarships for all Cox Communications' Southern California markets. For more information including eligibility, visit www.cox-cares-org.

Lakeside Park proposed naming rights modification

by Patt Bixby

The County will present proposed modification to the naming rights policy. The current policy allows for the board of supervisors to approve or deny the naming of facilities. The proposed change will include a fee for naming rights and allow the parks director to authorize requests that meet certain criteria.

The board and audience had a number of questions. It was suggested a letter be written to the Governing Board. "This is a very serious issue. Money could go elsewhere for naming rights and not remain in Lakeside" one board member observed. Kathy Kassel, Lakeside Chamber of Commerce Executive had concerns relating to the Lakeside Skate Park naming. Kassel said the Skate Park Committee had been told the Skate Park would be exempt. The county will be notified of the boards concerns.

The Planning Group was updated on a special meeting, which was held in regards to the undergrounding on Maine Ave. The Planning Board was asked to agree with the proposal to extend work hours from 9 a.m. - 3:30 p.m. to 8 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.

Board members had questions about the 6 month additional trenching time. Board member Milt Lyphert said allow longer hours. Help citizens on Maine Ave. It was argued the board needs a clear idea of the project.

The matter will be on the Boards Agenda Feb 12 at 6 p.m., at the Lakeside Community Center.

How to deal with Mother Nature's cold shoulder

by Dr. Rev. James L. Snyder

I have a little confession to make. I do not often make public confessions, but confession is good for the soul. My confession, however, has nothing whatsoever to do with my soul. Simply put, I am cold to the bone!

I guess I have been colder but I am suffering from brain freeze right now

I was hoping all that chatter about global warming was somewhere in the neighborhood of being true. If so, nobody happened to send the memo to Mother Nature. With the sophistication of our communication technology today, I am not sure how this memo failed to get to her. Of course, they could have sent the message with one of those infamous government computers. We all know how reliable they are.

Another thought along this line is that maybe Mother Nature got the memo all right, but, like all good mothers do, ignored it and went about her own business. After all, mothers really do know best even when it does not seem so at the time.

However, I am cold and need some encouragement or at least some warm thoughts along this line. The warmest thought I have had recently has been that I have relatives in colder areas than I am. I must confess it does make me feel a little better, just not that much warmer.

Where I live we don't have that cold stuff that piles up on the ground like they do up north keeping you from getting to where you want to go.

Whoever was singing, "I'm Dreaming of a White Christmas," please stop singing, Christmas is over. Start dreaming about something a little warmer than all of that white stuff, like a Green Easter.

This probably has been the coldest winter in a good long time and it got me to thinking, after all, what else can you do when everything is frozen?

With all the advancements in science and technology, why is it we cannot control the weather? Something as simple as the weather and nobody seems to be able to control it.

Politicians will get up and spout off at how they are going to change things and control things and improve things. Well, Mr. Politician, why don't you begin with the weather? Change the weather for a change.

Why can't these big shots control the weather? They spend a lot of time (and our money) trying to control us. They now want to tell us what we can eat and cannot eat and how much soda we can drink at any one time. They tell us how much of our money we need to send back to the government so they can raise their salaries and increase their benefits.

It seems quite a paradox that when our country is going through hard times and people who pay the taxes have to tighten their belts that it is time for politicians to vote on a raise in their salary. For once, I would like to see these political big shots vote on decreasing their salary and standing alongside the American people. The danger of that is, it would be such a shock to the American people that people would be dropping dead left and right.

So why can't these people control the weather? Why can't they pass a law regulating the temperature? They have a law regulating everything else. Why not the temperature? Why not the weather?

I am for having some of these politicians put together one of their infamous "subcommittees," sit down with Mother Nature and negotiate something that will make everybody happy, like warm weather. I would like to see some of my tax dollars go for something that would benefit everybody instead of some party at some insignificant political convention.

Personally, I think Mother Nature would be easy to work with under such circumstances as we have today. Every mother has a nurturing side and I believe there is no exception here with good old Mother Nature. Maybe she does not know how inconvenient this cold weather has been for us. I think she would be willing to negotiate a long these lines.

I would like to select the politicians to be on this committee myself. I have my own list and would be happy to set it up. The reason is, I know that when one of those politicians throws his chest out and begins one of those mind-numbing speeches, and you know they will, they always do, it will irritate Mother Nature. Boy, would I love to see her light into one of them. Nothing is more awesome than the fury of Mother Nature.

Besides, nothing is more idiotic than men or women, big in their own eyes, pontificating on things they cannot control as if they had any say in it.

I think if you cannot control something as commonplace as the weather you had better find out who can and align yourself up with that person.

The Bible tells us exactly who that is. "The LORD is slow to anger, and great in power, and will not at all acquit the wicked: the LORD hath his way in the whirlwind and in the storm, and the clouds are the dust of his feet" (Nahum 1:3).

I do not have to deal with Mother Nature, who incidentally does not exist; I deal with God who controls all things and I am happy to have him control my life as well.

Dear Dr. Luauna — In your darkest hour (part 2)

"Let's pray and ask God to open the door for you to leave." They said, "You don't want to marry someone you don't love, that's not God's plan." This Christian God talk was just as foreign as Spanish was to me. I sat sitting in front of this couple, as they shared about Jesus, I had never heard about Jesus. So I interrupted them, and said, "Wait, what does Jesus have to do with leaving this island?" They gently smiled, and said, "Let's pray." I had never prayed before so as they closed their eyes and bowed their heads, I followed their lead. They finished praying, asking Jesus to open the door for me to leave Puerto Rico, and return back to Colorado. They finished with, "Why don't we ask Jesus to be your Lord?" I really didn't understand what they were saying, but that day I prayed to receive Jesus into my life. They gave me a Bible, and wrote my birthdate inside the cover. Not knowing fully what they were talking about I left that school that day feeling somewhat lifted inside.

After being gone all day long I knew I had to break the news to this amazing family who loved my children that I was so grateful for their care while going through cancer treatments, but I couldn't marry their son. He was an amazing man, but I didn't love him enough to marry him.

While I was sharing this the older son came to break some great news to his parents, that he was accepted into the military as an officer, in two weeks he would be stationed in Colorado, and he could take what he needed to be shipped. Right at that moment I knew this was my open door. I spoke up and said, "Would you please allow me to pack my kids' things and my stuff in your shipping cargo?" He, without thinking said, "Sure, I have plenty of room." I looked into the eyes of this amazing couple, and said, "I'm sorry, I need to go home."

Not realizing the power of prayer and how God opens doors for those who cry out. Amazing, I was a broken single mother, with no one to talk to when I jumped into the car and drove through the whole island. Pulling over to weep for hours, trying to figure out what I was going to do, I felt so trapped, and alone? But I was not alone, Jesus heard my cry, His love for you and I is beyond our own understanding. I would like to tell you I served God after I arrived in Colorado. No! I was met at the airport and went out to party, I was home, forgetting the prayer I said before I left Puerto Rico. Three years went by, the enemy of my soul worked hard to trap me into a web of sin and darkness. Then three years later, another woman stopped me at the 7 Eleven and shared Jesus once again with me. Did I give my heart to Jesus that day? No, but 6 to 8 months later, the seeds that were planted in me were awakened. The Light was turned on; I walked into a church for the first time. What happened, in my darkest hour I cried out! I never saw the couple who prayed with me that one rainy day in the middle of an island. But one day I will see them again, because I'm sure they prayed for me to find my way to Jesus. If you want to know my whole story from that day on, you can read my book, "A Mother's Story - Part One & Two," available on my website: www.atouchfromabove.org

For Health's Sake

Health and wealth connected?

By studying Google search data, researchers led by SDSU professor John Ayers discovered Americans had more health concerns during the recession.

We ring in the New Year with hopes of being healthy, wealthy, and wise. A new study led by San Diego State University School of Public Health research professor John W. Ayers suggests that from a public health standpoint, health and wealth may be connected.

Ayers and his team examined the Google search patterns of Americans during the recent Great Recession and discovered that during that period, people searched for keywords related to stress-related health symptoms much more frequently than they would have if the recession hadn't taken place.

"There were 200 million excess health queries during the Great Recession," Ayers said.

While it's impossible to ascertain the motives of everyone who searched those terms, it's likely that most of these excess symptom searches reflect people who experienced these symptoms and sought out health information, Ayers said.

By looking for these more-frequent-than-expected search terms and matching them up to world events, Ayers added, public health officials can conduct population health surveillance on an unprecedented scale.

In the new study, published today in the American Journal of Preventive Medicine, Ayers and his colleagues identified five root words associated with psychosomatic symptoms: chest, headache, heart, pain, and stomach. Controlling for search terms that might return false positives (such as "tool chest"), the researchers looked at how frequently people in the United States searched for those root terms during the Great Recession, here defined as December 2008 through 2011, and came up with a list of 343 commonly searched symptoms.

Next, the researchers calculated what the values for those symptoms' search frequency over the same period would have been if there had been no Great Recession, correcting for such variables as the growing availability of Internet availability and increased usage.

Comparing those values to people's actual search behavior revealed that certain symptoms were searched for with far more frequency during the recession. Searches for "stomach ulcer symptoms" were 228 percent higher than would be expected and "headache symptoms" were 193 percent higher.

Aggregating the symptoms into themes, the researchers found that several broad categories of health concerns stuck out: Queries about headaches were 41 percent higher than expected; for hernia, 37 percent; for chest pain, 35 percent; and for arrhythmia, 32 percent. Back pain, gastric pain, joint pain, and toothache also popped up with greater-than-expected frequency among the search terms.

"The Great Recession undoubtedly got inside the body via the mind, namely through stress," Ayers said. "For example, the experiences of the unemployed may be stressful, but also those not directly affected by unemployment may become fearful of losing their jobs."

Benjamin Althouse, an epidemiologist and Omidyar Fellow with the Santa Fe Institute and one of the study's coauthors, said that by monitoring health-related search terms, public health officials could recognize burgeoning epidemics such as stress-related chest pain and direct resources to help people reduce their stress or take other precautionary measures. This technique is quicker, cheaper, and more efficient than traditional survey methodology, he added.

"The status quo approaches to public health surveillance are both contrived and expensive," Althouse said. "Internet search queries may be a significantly more precise metric, suggesting precisely when and how the population's health is changing."

Ayers added that search engines like Google could even interpret these searches and suggest links to Internet-based treatment options.

"The web is a stigma-reducing and cost-reducing venue to reach patients who search for, but do not otherwise receive, treatment because they cannot afford medications or copayments," Ayers said.

Ayers' research is supported by a Google.org grant, although Google.org played no role in designing or conducting this study.

Golf 101 at Cottonwood

by Debbie Norman

My son Brent and I have enjoyed golfing for several years, but were tired of being left behind by others we golfed with; so we decided we wanted to improve our game. Brent is 14-years-old and myself, well...let's just say old enough to be his mother. I contacted Rex Cole, General Manager and Head Professional of Cottonwood Golf Club, and he agreed to give us golf lessons.

We started out on a brisk Sunday morning at a cool 57° here in Southern California. We met Cole on the driving range at Cottonwood Golf Club and he instructed us to grab our 7-irons. That made me happy as I have problems getting the ball into the air with my irons. Cole proceeded to explain the three grips of golf. Neither Brent nor I knew there were three grips. He showed me the grip most women use as to get the most power and Brent the best grip for him.

We began with baby steps, which was a good thing, as everything I thought I knew was wrong. Once Cole showed us the correct way to stand, hold the clubs, swing and hit the ball, we were on our way to practice, practice, and practice. As we practiced, he did 'fine tuning' on us.

"I could have a row of 15 golfers, and each one of them may have different body language and need to change the way they swing," Cole said. "If we are right handed, we golf with our left and if we are left handed, we golf with our right. It's getting our minds to work with our bodies to swing."

We also learned that using the top of our torso was the incorrect way to swing, instead, work from the feet up. So many bad habits to break — Cole may be in in for a long ride.

Week two, on another brisk morning, my daughter Brittany and my husband Dave joined in the lessons. I suspect they saw how much Brent and I improved in just one lesson and they didn't want to get left behind!

Brittany Watson

This was a practice week of what we learned on week one and a new week for my daughter Brittany. When Cole had her hit the 7-iron, she was already proficient and moved her to the woods, her weak spot. He instructed her how to hold the club and swing and then put her on one foot to hit. This helped her obtain balance. She hit on one foot for more than 30 minutes.

Needless to say Brittany was sore the next day, as we all were. Anyone who says golf is not exercise has never golfed correctly. All of us had sore shoulders, arms and torsos. But, only two lessons in and there is a remarkable improvement. Even my husband, who has golfed since he was a kid, was learning techniques he never knew.

I often thought that if I could learn golf on my own, I didn't need lessons. After years on the course, I find that I couldn't have been more incorrect in my thinking. Everyone can improve with the right person instructing them. Golf is a great way to get away from the stress of work and life. And women, it's not just for men. There are more and more women out on the golf course, and with our busy lives of work and family, it's a great release at the end of the day, week or anytime you just need to get away and hit something.

Don't know how to golf? Call Cottonwood Golf Club and get set up an appointment with an instructor. Cottonwood will work with one's budget and turn anyone into a happy golfer! And don't forget the kids. Lifetime member of the PGA, Rex Cole specializes in teaching children and has regular classes for all ages.

Cottonwood is located at 3121 Willow Glen Drive in El Cajon and can be reached by calling (619) 442-9891. Instructors Rex Cole PGA, John Klein PGA and Carol Lingle LPGA are available for lessons. For more information, visit www.cottonwoodgolf.com

Ready for a little play time

 Alpine, California is a quaint little town nestled in the foothills of East County. Like most communities, the town of Alpine has seen much growth in the past 20 years. Along with a major chain grocery store, new housing developments, the Viejas Casino with a hotel and an outlet center, a Veterans Wall of Honor, and a few national fast food chains have found their way into the small town.

But the town was lacking one major entity, a place for kids to play — until six months ago. On August 1, 2013 Joseph Vanderbilt, with the help of the community, opened Alpine's first youth center.

Vanderbilt, a 20-year resident of Alpine saw the need and followed through. He is part of an independent Christian organization, backed by Behold Christian Ministry. Through the ministry, Vanderbilt contacted local churches and businesses to form a partnership to make this dream come true. Together, Vanderbilt, local churches and the community revitalized a building that had been vacant for years and turned it into a safe place for kids to play.

The Alpine Youth Center, located at 2153 Arnold Way. Inside are two pool tables, a ping pong table, an air hockey table, foosball, basketball arcade, board games, table art, two Xbox 360 stations, a Wii station. Outside the youths can enjoy football, basketball, dodge ball, wall ball and on Saturdays a skateboard park!

The center also has guitar lessons, arts and crafts classes and looking to begin a martial arts class. Throughout the year, the center holds special events for the whole community. The Youth Center has a very protective environment, including security, and high moral standards are taught and expected from each youth.

"It's been really positive for the kids," Vanderbilt said. "We like to get them physically active outside, not just tucked away inside."

The Youth Center has become a reality in Alpine because of the partnerships Vanderbilt has built. These include: Alpine Fence, Calvary Chapel, Mountain View Bible, Grace Fellowship, First Baptist, Emmanuel Christian Church in Harbison Canyon, Janet's Café, Ace Hardware, Albertson's, Online Bookkeeping, Cynthia Jackson, Bob Kelly and WCR West Coast Ride Shop.

"The Center has the ability to accommodate more kids and we would like to invite everyone to come out and see what we have to offer," Vanderbilt said. "Everything here is free!"

Best pals Chase Demarco and Ethan Lay enjoy the new skate park at the Youth Center.

Pool tables inside the Youth Center with a rustic 'porch-like' setting to the side where kids can sit and watch or simply relax.

Hours are Monday - Friday 2 - 7 p.m., Saturday 12 - 4 p.m. If anyone has a special talent they would like to share at a workshop, or would like to make a donation, please contact Joseph Vanderbilt at (619) 659-5088 or email Joseph@BEHOLDcm.org

Jack Ryan is back

Review by Diana Saenger

With so many actors through the years playing Tom Clancy's character of CIA undercover agent Jack Ryan, it seems to be more complicated with each new film released to get involved in the story. In this instance, the film is somewhat based on Clancy's work.

Nearly 10 years since the last Jack Ryan film, Chris Pine steps into the role in Jack Ryan: Shadow Recruit. We learn through back story that Ryan joined the Marines after 9/11, was injured in a helicopter crash and went through a long re-hab. The good news is he met the love of his life in his physical therapist Cathy (Keira Knightley).

When he's determined fit enough, Ryan is recruited to the CIA by agent Thomas Harper (Kevin Costner) and sent to Russia to deter a terrorist plot by Viktor Cherevin (Branagh) revolving around world economics.

Concentrating on his work is far more intense when Cathy -- who suspects his secretive-ness may be because he's having an affair -- shows up unannounced in Jack's hotel room in Russia. Ryan starts juggling the tasks with worry and intense frustration. When the enemy seems close at hand, Harper is always there to rescue Ryan. At one point I wondered why Harper didn't just take the assignment himself.

Branagh, who also directs the film, is interesting in a role that is rather subdued. In some scenes Viktor seems more interested in wooing Cathy than keeping Ryan's espionage nose out of the way.

Pine does well in his role, again a subdued protagonist which requires more brain power for his character than muscle power. Will Pine follow the steps of keeping this role should there be another film, or passing it on as has been done with the likes of Harrison Ford, Ben Affleck and Alec Baldwin?

What is exciting in Jack Ryan: Shadow Recruit are the action scenes and the huge cast which always leaves movie watchers on guard and suspecting everyone in a scene of being the bad person. Cinematographer Haris

Zambarloukos (Locke, Thor, Mama Mia) captures the hustle and bustle of the city and keeps up the skirmishes. The crew on the huge Ultimate Arm, a high-speed, high-torque, gyro-stabilized remote-controlled camera crane, expertly mastered the high speed chases through the streets creating an intense, roller-coaster ride for audience members.

Review by Diana Saenger

Taking one's kids to survey a potential college can arouse all kinds of emotions in both parents and the teens. Screenwriters Glenn German and Adam Rodgers (who also directs) use this premise to create an amusing and thought-provoking story in At Middleton.

The story, actually born from Rodgers own experience with his father, is delightful and well delivered by its cast of Vera Farmiga, Andy Garcia, Taissa Farmiga and Spencer Lofranco.

Mother Edith (Vera Farmiga) is driving her daughter Audrey (Taissa Farmiga) to check out Middleton College. While Edith isn't so sure about the school, or more importantly ready to have her daughter out on her own -- Audrey is ready for both. She already knows this is the school for her because that's where Dr. Roland Emerson (Tom Sheritt) is a professor and she adores his book and work.

Meanwhile, George (Garcia), a cardiologist, and his son Conrad (Lofranco) are making their way to Middleton. George thinks it's a fine college and insists Conrad put on his necktie before they arrive at the school. Conrad is barely interested in doing either.

All arrivals join in a group to be shown the school's attributes and as guide Justin (Nicholas Braun) sometimes points out -- the shortcomings of the school. Edith and George get off to a bad start in the parking lot, and when they realize they do not want to follow their children around the school, take off on their own.

Edith has a very light side to her personality and soon has George pulling stunts he might have done while in school such as "borrow" someone's bike to ride around the campus, sneak their way up to the tower where the view is terrific but makes George -- afraid of heights -- resist looking."

George and Edith are soon in tune with each other, playing off each other's humor and seeing which can get the other into a predicament that would get a student expelled for sure. They crash a drama class where the teacher insists they get on stage; get high on pot with a few students (the film would have survived just fine without this element); and have so much fun they deliberately do not answer their children's phones trying to locate them.

Among all the laughs -- and there are plenty in this film -- the bottom line is this is a love story that happens in one day. Although both Edith and George are married to someone else, they make a connection that stirs them to their core and opens up a million questions. Not only have they each found the school highly attractable, but each other as well.

Farmiga is perfectly cast as the adorable, risk-taking and full of life Edith. She charms the more placid George into all sorts of things he might have done as a student on campus. Eventually he can't take his eyes off of her and runs behind her through the school as if they were the only ones there. Garcia, usually more present in serious roles, transform the docile doctor into a man longing for some frivolity in his life. Both Taissa (Vera's younger sister) and Lofranco carry out their roles well.

German and Rodgers' totally entertaining script does a great switcheroo when by the end of the movie Audrey and Conrad have both made complete opposite decisions about attending Middleton. George and Edith know they have experienced a day they will never have again, unless.....!

The Comic Book Store — keeping comic fans happy

by Brent Norman

Tucked back in a strip mall on Broadway in El Cajon is a specialty market -- the Comic Book Store. I went there to interview the owner, Karl Kramer.

Upon entering the store, the smell of colorful paper flooded my nostrils, bringing a sense of anticipation to update myself on the lives of my favorite fictional heroes. Kramer likes to stay updated on his readings as well, especially a DC publication entitled "Fables."

Kramer grew up in New Jersey. When asked if he read comics as a kid he enthusiastically answered, "Oh Yes." He predates Spiderman in his readings with comics such as the 1950s Superman. He claimed to have read, in his own words, "all of 'em!"

Kramer said owning a comic shop was not always his dream. However, he must find joy in the business because he has owned three comic shops in his life. He has been in the comic selling business on and off since 1978 and ran this current shop for 14 months. Before his last store he worked for the city of San Diego until retirement.

Then, one day, he went in his garage and saw all his comics and realized he wasn't ready to retire. He started selling them again. Kramer said that he liked the idea of a comic shop and enjoys conversing with his customers.

The Comic Book Store carries the most current titles from DC, Marvel, Dark Horse, IDW, Dynamite, Kaboom, and Archie Publications as well as a few other companies. Aside from comic books Kramer sells paperback and manga books, action figures, comic boxes and bags, Magic cards, Yu-Gi-Go cards, and board games such as "The Walking Dead Monopoly" and "The Walking Dead Risk."

Kramer restocks every Wednesday and encourages adults and children of all ages to check out the store and not forget that free comic book days are on the first Saturday in May and the Saturday and Sunday before Halloween.

The Comic Book Store is open 11 a.m. - 6 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays and located at 1081 Broadway in El Cajon. Kramer can be reached by calling (619) 966-9030.

The undersigned caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located and more than three months have elapsed since such recordation. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (619) 704-1090 or visit this Internet Web site www.priorityposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case 13421. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site.
