New Roots Fresh Farm Community Garden

Garden has produced 40,000 pounds of fresh produce for families in need

Community members and volunteers gather to celebrate the one-year anniversary of the Community Garden.

by Emily Eichner

ew Roots Fresh Farm Community Garden, a 5-acre garden in El Cajon, has helped provide community members in need with fresh food to feed their families. Recently, the Garden celebrated its one-year anniversary. More than 50 volunteers gathered to help the community, from all over the world, to clean, garden, weed and lay mulch to maintain their garden.

State Senator Joel Anderson attended the anniversary and recognized all volunteers from Kaiser Permanente, International Rescue Committee, and Saint Augustine High School. Anderson said, "The volunteers empower families and community members to thrive in El Cajon, while supporting locally grown foods and promoting healthy living. By helping these plants grow, these dedicated volunteers are growing a healthy community."

Kaiser Permanente has shown local leadership in promoting a healthy lifestyle by becoming a partner with the International Rescue Committee (IRC) to create the New Roots Fresh Farm Community Garden. The garden consists of 40 plots, and each belongs to a different household, who plants crops of their choice. Some families have sold their produce at the El Cajon Farmers Market.

Dr. Paul Bernstein, Medical Director and Chief of Staff of Kaiser Permanente San Diego, said, "Kaiser Permanente supports innovative ways to bring nutritious, healthy foods and active living to our communities. This garden enhances physical activity, cultural community and spiritual well-being for the neighborhood. Over the past year, the garden has produced an estimated 40,000 pounds of fresh fruits and vegetables to feed the plot owner's families or others in need through local non-profit partnerships.

Gardeners at the New Roots Fresh Farm Community Garden must be either a resident of El Cajon or an employee of Kaiser Permanente. To learn more or apply to become a gardener, visit http://www.rescue. org/us-program/us-san-diegoca/new-community-gardenel-cajon

Senator Joel Anderson presents Bob Montgomery, Executive Director of the International Rescue Committee (IRC) in San Diego and Paul Bernstein, MD, San Diego Area Medical Director for Southern California Permanente Medical Group with proclamations for their hard work.

Time to let Mother Nature do the watering for a change

Turn off irrigation systems for up to two weeks following heavy rainfall

he San Diego County Water Authority urges residents and businesses to turn off their irrigation systems and leave them off for up to two weeks following the storm that has delivered significant rainfall this week. A few rainy days can provide enough water for lawns to survive for weeks without irrigation, and they provide a valuable chance to save stored water supplies for next summer when water reserves will be even more important.

"This week's rain won't end

the drought, but it allows us to immediately reduce our water use by turning off sprinkler systems," said Mark Weston, chair of the Water Authority's Board of Directors. "It's important that we take advantage of every opportunity to decrease outdoor water consumption and prepare for the likelihood of reduced water supplies next

After the storm passes, do not begin watering again until the top one to two inches of soil are dry. Lawns that lose their lush green luster will rejuvenate with the next rain.

While forecasts for Southern California predict above-average precipitation this winter, of the state and the critical Sierra snowpack aren't as optimistic. On Monday, the initial 2015 allocation from the State Water Project – an important water source for the San Diego region – was set at 10 percent of requested supplies. The figure may fluctuate up or down depending on precipitation over the next few months.

"Ten percent is a very low initial allocation, and it's almost certain that the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California – our region's largest water supplier - will impose allocations in 2015 if conditions don't improve quickly," said Ken Weinberg, water resources

Watering...

director for the Water Authority. "We each need to take additional steps to conserve during the fall and winter months when landscapes don't need as much water."

Outdoor watering accounts for more than half of a typical household's water use in California, and it has become a focal point for water conservation efforts as the drought extends into a fourth consecutive year. The Water Authority estimates that widespread participation in a voluntary two-week hiatus from using landscape watering systems across the region this month could save more than 5,500 acre-feet of water – enough to serve about 11,000 families of four for a year.

Many San Diego County residents and businesses are taking the opportunity afforded by rainfall and cooler temperatures during the fall and winter to replace their high-water-use grass with WaterSmart landscaping more suited to the county's semi-arid climate. Rebates of up to $3.50 per square foot are available for turf replacement projects that qualify. Details are at WaterSmartSD.org.

The Water Authority's Board has declared a Drought Alert condition calling for mandatory water conservation measures. Restrictions are in place across the region, though they vary by member agency. For information about water-use rules by community, along with details about drought conditions and conservation-related resources, go to WheninDrought.org.

If MWD decreases water deliveries next year, the impacts in San Diego County will be reduced by two decades of investments by the Water Authority and its member agencies to enhance regional water supply reliability. Those efforts included acquiring independent Colorado River water transfers and helping launch the Carlsbad Desalination Project, which is expected to start producing water as soon as fall 2015.

Lakeside Roundup

Santee Mayor to run for Assemblyman

antee Mayor Randy Vopel has confirmed after he finishes his last two years as Mayor, he will run for the State Assembly's 77th District, a seat now held by Assemblyman Brian Jones who will be termed out. Vopel said he will not have the endorsement of Senator Joel Anderson. The Mayor feels confident he can win the Assembly seat.

Vopel stated as long as he is the Mayor of Santee, he will not allow Mast Boulevard to continue through into Lakeside connecting to Highway 67 and he will do what he can to see it never happens.

In the early 2000's, a proposed Village Community Fanita, in Santee, provided one million dollars toward the completion of a portion of Highway 52 to alleviate traffic on surface streets, with the understanding Mast would be opened up into Lakeside. Vopel said that was their understanding, not his. Vopel does not feel it is worth the cost to go a short distance and spend the money to help Lakeside. When asked if he does not like Lakeside, he replied, "That's not it, it's the cost."

Inspiration

Walking In Faith with Christiaan & Tonya Vos

by Diana Saenger

hristiaan Vos is a minister at the KerkvoorNu (Church For Today) in Duiven, Holland—10 minutes from the Rhine River.
His wife Tanya takes care of organizing the church and helping people find their way through discipleship. They started their church in a school building with a small group of people attending.

Duiven is about the size of El Cajon with approximately 100,000 residents. Less than 1000 of them actually attend church. There are three churches in town, a Roman Catholic Church with 60 people attending; a Dutch Reformed Church with 40-50 people attending; and their church with about 400 people attending. About 100 of those are kids in flourishing youth ministries. When the Vos' started their church there were hardly any children attending.

"This is really hard on the kids," Christiaan said. "The kids who go to our church and then go to school, are the only ones who believe in Jesus. There are no Christian values with their friends, so a lot of the kids have a hard time maintaining their faith."

Christiaan and Tanya met in 1990 when she went to Belgium with the Love Europe campaign of OM (Operation Mobilization). She met Christiaan the first day on the bus.

"He was one of the 10,000 young believers that had come from all over the world to share their faith with the people in Belgium," Tanya said. "From the moment we met, we had a connection and enjoyed each other's company in our free moments." "On our third day together; I knew this was the man I was going to marry."

After the campaign, they both returned to their homes. Tanya went to San Diego, California and Christiaan to the small town of Vroomshoop in The Netherlands. For a year the couple wrote letters and sent tapes back and forth until they both knew that they were meant to be. In the spring of 1991 Tanua flew to the Netherlands which was from then on to be her home. In September of that same year Christiaan began his study to be a pastor at the Baptist seminary and the University of Utrecht in the Netherlands. They lived with his parents and saw each other on the weekends. This gave Tanya a chance to learn

Tanya and Christiaan Vos. Credit: courtesy

Dutch from his mother and take classes at school in a nearby town. A year after they married they moved to the city where Christiaan was studying. They started their life together in a small caravan. Today, the couple laughs about those days and their memories.

Tanya tries to visit her mother Jan who lives in East County every year, and occasionally Christiaan comes along for a visit. Christiaan said, "I'm always amazed at how many churches are in your area, and when I go into stores how many Christian books there are to read. In our area you won't find any Christian books, in a regular bookstore. Not even a Bible."

The couple has also found that even though someone in the United States might not be a believer they do believe there is a God, whereas in the Netherlands, they don't.

"A lot of the big theologians are from the Netherlands, and 60 years ago, Holland was a Christian country," Christiaan said. "When they were liberated during the war they thanked God for their freedom. But now they think they are free and that they don't need religion."

KerkvoorNu is growing in attendance about 10 percent a year. They have many different outreach programs for all different ages, hoping to change the image that their community has of God and faith.

"Our mission in life is to represent the goodness of God in an area that has gotten so dark over the years that less than one percent of the population goes to church," Tanya said. "That's far less than the countries we send our missionaries to. God has placed a passion in our hearts for the people here in the Liemers and we hope and pray that His light and freedom will break through. And we ask that the believers in San Diego will pray with us that God's power may be released and His grace be poured out upon these people.'

The church does not own a building and are currently meeting in three different facilities, but its hope to set people free by the power of Christ.

Dear Dr. Luauna — The ending is worth the meaning

Dear Readers,

any times in life, we settle for less than God's best for us. We wish things could be different but don't see any change. Why is that?

Years ago an amazing gentleman said something to me I have never forgotten. "The ending is worth the meaning!" I was opening a new business, and I had worked so hard, but right at the very end I ran out of money. I was so close to opening those doors and yet I felt it was so far away. I remember just sitting down on the floor in the corner of the shop as I started to tear up.

I was in Colorado Springs at the time; it was right in the cold of winter; the fresh snow had just fallen on the ground. I had my shop windows all covered with paper because I didn't want anyone to look in until I was ready for the grand opening. It was about 9:15 p.m. as I sat there on the floor thinking, "What am I going to do?" I had just put on my long, warm, wool gray jacket because it was cold. When I heard a knock on the door, I was surprised, as I looked at my watch wondering, "Who would be knocking at 9:15 p.m., all the stores were closed?"

I had been working with drywall mud, I had sanded one area and didn't realize the drywall powder was on my face; there were marks of my tears, which ran down my cheeks. With my hair in braids, my face and hair covered with drywall powder, all bundled up in my long jacket I went to open the door.

There stood at the door this very distinguished handsome man named Gary. He, in his long, black cashmere jacket, dress suit, fancy dress shoes, and his new Mercedes parked right outside the door still running as he stood there at the doorway. I had talked to him a few times before; he was a very well-known business man who owned many buildings throughout Colorado Springs.

I smiled, and said, "Hello." I pretended all was well. He smiled back and said, "I saw the lights on late and wanted to make sure you were OK." I told him, "Oh, thank you for stopping." I put my head down because I didn't want him to see me tear up again. He gently reached over, turned my head, lifting up my chin to look at me eye to eye, then he smiled and said gently, "The ending is worth the meaning." He went on to say, "Keep looking up, it's going to be okay, these doors will open, you'll see." Then, just like that, he turned around and walked back to his car. I kept standing at the door looking, as he opened his car door, he shouted it out again. "The ending is worth the meaning!"

He smiled, waved and drove off. Those words echoed through my mind and still do today. You see, it's easy to start off in Jesus, but how many really finish to the end? Psalm 119:33; "Teach me, O Lord, the way of Your statutes, and I shall keep it to the end." II Timothy 4:7-8; "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith. Finally, there is laid out for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge, will give to me on that day, and not to me only but also to all who have loved his appearing."

Are you going through a trial? Don't give up. "The ending is worth the meaning!" Yes! Those doors did open, and the grand opening was wonderful. One day heaven shall open, and Jesus shall call His church up to meet Him in the air. "The ending is worth the meaning!" Stay the course, and keep looking up! I love you. Don't allow the commercialism of Christmas to steal the real meaning. You are important to JESUS, His love for you will never end. God bless you!

Holiday survival tips: Practical advice to help anyone coping with grief oliday cheer and merrymaking may be everywhere this time of year, but for thousands grieving the loss of a loved one, the holiday season can be an emotional minefield. And there's no road map for easy navigation.

Coping with grief over the death of a loved one during the holidays can be difficult. Memories of holiday traditions shared with a loved one who died may be painful. Somehow, mourners must navigate an emotional roller coaster ride during the holidays that can be bittersweet with nostalgia and happy memories, and also feel painfully cruel and isolating.

The Tragedy Assistance Program for Survivors (TAPS), a national nonprofit organization offering comfort and care to families of our fallen military troops, offers the following tips to help anyone who is grieving the death of a loved one during the holiday season.

Take charge of your holiday season. Anticipating the holiday, especially if it's the first one without a cherished family member, can be worse than the actual holiday. Take charge of your holiday plans, and map out how you will spend your time. This can help relieve anxiety.

Make plans. Plan to spend the holidays where you feel nurtured, emotionally safe, and comfortable. Having a plan will help you navigate the holiday season and its activities. But remember to plan for flexibility, as you may not know how your emotions will respond, especially if it is your first or second holiday season after the death of a loved one.

Find sustenance for the soul. Your church, synagogue. mosque or other faith community may offer services. resources, and support networks for the bereaved. You may want to look for a support group for people who are grieving and have suffered a similar loss. Families who have lost a loved one serving in the military may find comfort by connecting with other survivors through the TAPS online community, peer support groups, peer mentoring or care groups.

Don't be afraid to change your holiday traditions. Some traditions may be a comfort, while others can cause pain. Consider which traditions to keep, and which ones to forego this year. Do not feel like you have to do something because you have always done it that way.

Include your lost loved one in gift-giving. Give a gift on behalf of your loved one to someone else. Consider making a donation to a charity in memory of your loved one.

Create a tribute. Light a candle, display a favorite photograph, or set a place at the dinner table to represent the missing loved one. Consider writing a letter to your loved one about the holidays and your special memories with that person.

Be gentle with yourself. Realize that familiar traditions, sights, smells and even tastes, may be comforting, or may jolt your emotions. This is the time of year when you need to be careful with your emotions and listen to yourself.

Attend holiday functions if you can. Consider attending holiday parties and events, especially if you'll be able to spend time with supportive family members and friends. Make an escape plan in case the event is more than you can handle. If you think a holiday gathering might be more than you can bear, it is ok to stay home.

Don't pretend you haven't experienced a loss. Imagining that nothing has happened does not make the pain of losing a loved one go away, nor does it make the holidays easier to endure. Even though holiday memories may be painful, they can be comforting. It is ok to talk with others about what you have lost and what the holidays mean to you.

Pay attention to your health. It's often difficult for people who have experienced a recent loss to sleep. Make sure you get regular rest and drink lots of water. Do not overindulge in sweets or alcohol. If you feel overwhelmed, talk with your medical care provider

Take stock of both joy and sadness. Give yourself permission to feel joy as well as sadness. Don't feel like you have to "be a certain way" because of your loss, or because it is the holidays. Just be yourself.

Express your feelings. Bottling up your feelings may add to distress, not lessen it. To express your feelings, use your creativity to write a poem, talk with a supportive friend, create a painting, or pen a journal entry.

Share your holiday season with someone else. There are many lonely people who might like to experience the holiday season alongside someone else. Consider volunteering with a local charity or soup kitchen, inviting a neighbor for a special holiday meal or including others in your holiday activities.

For more tips on dealing with grief during the holidays, go to the TAPS website at www.taps.org and look for our holiday survival guide. TAPS will hold a special online chat for grieving military families on November 19 at 9pm Eastern Time with bereavement expert Darcie Sims to discuss handling the holidays. Recruiting crisis

The chief of staff of the Air Force decided that he would personally intervene in the recruiting crisis affecting all of our armed services. He directed that a nearby Air Force base be opened and that all eligible young men and women be invited. As he and his staff were standing near a brand new F-15 Fighter, a pair of twin brothers who looked like they had just stepped off a Marine Corps recruiting poster walked up to them.

The chief of staff walked up to them, stuck out his hand and introduced himself. He looked at the first young man and asked, "Son, what skills can you bring to the Air Force?"

The young man looks at him and says, "I'm a pilot!"

The general turns to his aide and says, "Sign him up — all the paper work done, everything, do it today!" The aide hustles the young man off.

The general looks at the second young man and asked, "What skills can you bring to the Air Force?"

The young man says, "I chop wood!"

"Son," the general replies, "we don't need woodchoppers in the Air Force. What else do you know how to do?"

"I chop wood!"

"Young man," huffs the general, "you are not listening to me. We don't need woodchoppers; this is the 21st century!"

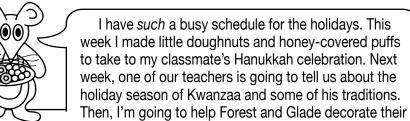

"Well," the young man says, "you hired my brother!"

"Of course we did," says the general, "But he's a pilot!"

The young man rolls his eyes and says, "I HAVE to chop it before he can pile it!"

Bolts refuse to lose

by Chuck Karazsia

n a place where West Coast teams have never won Baltimore, MD, the (8-4) San Diego Chargers broke the trend. Continuing their winning ways (three-in-a-row) defeating the Baltimore Ravens 34-33 in an impressive comeback (down 10-points in the fourth quarter) at the Ravens house. This was an exciting emotional fist to cuff beat-down that will be looked back on as a major turning point in the Chargers 2014 season.

Securing second place in the AFC West, chasing the (9-3) Denver Broncos, the Chargers post season has already started as they face the NFL's toughest remainder of a four-game schedule playing New England and Denver at home and San Francisco and Kansas City on the road to finish the season.

Trailing throughout the whole game, the Chargers mounted a fourth quarter comeback after down 23-13 through three stanzas. Orchestrating three fourth quarter touchdown drives, the Chargers defense and special teams handed Philip Rivers the keys that drove the Chargers limosine to an amazing victory.

Beginning the comeback, RB Ryan Mathews rumbled 14-yards for a touchdown climaxing a five play, 59-yard drive that ate up only 2:05 of the clock. Losing control after allowing a Flacco one-yard TD run, the score was 30-20 Ravens when history was made.

Directing a six-play, 77-yard scoring drive, Rivers found Keenan Allen for a 23-yard touchdown tightening the score 30-27 in two minutes 33 seconds.

After a Tucker field goal put the Ravens up by six at 33-27, a determined Philip Rivers starting from his own 20-yard line drove the offense down the field on an eight-play 80-yd scoring drive that culminated with the game winner. A one-yard touchdown strike to wide receiver Eddie Royal, redeeming himself from an earlier lost second quarter fumble.

This left just :38 seconds on the clock Baltimore's last ditch comeback attempt was thwarted as the Ravens ran out of time when their receiver Aikens was tackled in bounds, expiring the clock and the Ravens offense. Giving the Bolts one of the greatest comebacks in team history.

Rivers finished the game 34-of-45, 383-yards, 3 TD's, 1 int. QB rating 113.5 which generated 440-yards of offense. Throwing the ball to six different receivers. Keenan Allen led the Chargers with 11 catches for 121-yards, two of them touchdowns, followed by Royal 9-98, Gates 7-83, and M. Floyd 3-85.

Gates' receptions were critical in keeping drives alive. Malcolm Floyd spread the field with his deep threat evidenced by the Ravens pass interference penalty in the end zone prior to and setting up the Royal game winning score.

The Chargers offense did start sloppy turning the ball over (interception, fumble). It was the grit and determination from the Bolts 'D' that kept the team in the game stopping the Ravens in the red zone numerous times as they settled for field goals instead of touchdowns, the difference in the game.

Give veteran center Trevor Robinson acquired from the Bengals an A+ for coming on in relief of rookie center Chris Watt (injured calf) for not missing a beat on snaps and blocking in over a quarter of work, especially in crunch time.

But it was the dramatic comeback by Rivers and the offense that did the Ravens in, hence the best comeback in the history of the Chargers.

Bye-bye Ravens...

Now with momentum on their side the Chargers look to their next two games at home to help put them over the top in the NFL playoffs against two of the NFL's top teams in the Patriots and Broncos.

After practicing in town all week, the New England Patriots will play the Chargers at Qualcomm Stadium Sunday evening in a nationally televised audience with kickoff scheduled at 5:30 p.m.

Stanley Kubrick Collection reveals his expertise and views of colleagues and actors

by Diana Saenger

arner Bros. Home Entertainment has recently released
STANLEY KUBRICK: THE MASTERPIECE COLLECTION BLU-RAY. Kubrick a well-known writer, producer, and director for 48 years had a special relationship with Warner Bros. Following his death in 1999, Kubrick's wife Christiane opened her home to Warner Bros. with access to film props, cameras, equipment, production facilities, and personal aspects about her husband.

The collection includes Discs with eight films including: Lolita (1962), Dr. Strange-love (1964), 2001: A Space Odyssey (1968), A Clockwork Orange (1971), Barry Lyndon (1975), The Shining (1980), Full Metal Jacket (1987) and Eyes Wide Shut (1999) as well as the documentary Kubrick Remembered by Director/ Producer Gary Khammar and featuring Never-Seen Footage of Kubrick's House, Studio and Family. Khammar formed the content production company, Light Source & Imagery in 1990, with business partner, Jon Barbour, and produced hundreds of behind-the-scenes programs for every major television and film company, including the series, Behind the Screen for Microsoft's X-Box Channel, and produced and directed Warner Bros. 90th anniversary documentary, Tales From The Lot.

While I was at Warner Bros., Khammar and several actors from some of Kubrick's films were available for interviews.

Leon Vitali is an English actor in stage, television and film. He played the role of Lord Bullingdon in Kubrick's Barry Lyndon. Over the years he began a professional relationship and friendship with Kubrick. He worked in many areas of Kubrick's filmmaking process. This included Eyes Wide Shut, where he also played the Red Cloak who confronts Tom Cruise in an infamous scene.

"This documentary shows you there is still great interest in his work," Vitali said. "I did all his original restorations negative transfers, and we restored all the sound tracks to 5.1."

Dominic Savage, at age 10, played the Young Lord Bullingdon in Barry Lyndon. "I remember spending a lot of time in this coach and Stanley just sat close by and did take after take, and finally he said, "That was just like Bette Davis," and all I thought was, 'who is Bette Davis?' He was just credible at those intimate moments; he was there with you, and even at age 10, I was aware of his experimentation. I make films myself now and always reflect on what he was like as a director to bring out special qualities in his actors.

"He could probably be in The Guinness Books of World Records for the most takes of any director, Vitali said. "He had a reputation as a control freak and often he was. He was producing the film, directing the film, shot the film and continually rewriting, and he had to keep an eye on the budget. His method was to find the right actor for the role, then let them go and just work. He would ask them to do a little more and push them as far as he could. He was very creative and not telling the actors what to do. He never planned how he was going to do a scene until we were actually on the floor working. He would pick up the camera and walk around maybe 50 times until he found the right angle for his first shot. Malcolm McDowell said,' why aren't you directing me, replied Kubrick, 'I'm not a drama school.'

Kubrick was a unique director who left Hollywood early to do all his filmmaking in England. There were many misconceptions about him.

"For me, it was always that he lacked emotion," Savage said. "While he was tough for people he was also incredibly kind, very generous and very emotional. There are parts of his films that still reduce me to tears because there is a beauty to them "

"He was the greatest filmmaker of the 20th century and a force of nature," Vitali said. "He covered every genre and never repeated himself. Even when you look at Paths of Glory clearly an antiwar film, or Full Metal Jacket which when thought of as an antiwar film, he said no it's just a look at what war does to people and the youth of the country.'

Ryan O'Neal played the part of Barry Lyndon in the film. On this day he was full of humor talking about his experiences with Kubrick. When asked about his experience on the film, he replied with a smile that it was, "An Ordeal."

"You turn yourself over to him and hope that someday he'll let you go. It took me a year and a half. Luckily at that age I had legs because you do a lot of takes and there are no standins, and it takes a long time to like the set, so you learn a new rhythm of the way to work. And since most of the lighting must be by candles, if we didn't get the take, we had to blow them out and start all over. Working with Kubrick was very unique. We all loved him, and whatever he wanted we would try to do.'

It's said that Kubrick expected a lot out of his actors, but expected more out of himself. O'Neal found this to be true.

"Sure, he's operating the camera, directing us, doing rewrites, so he had his hands full. I was contracted for 18 weeks, and after 18 weeks asked how much are you making, shouldn't you be loading the truck's? (O'Neal laughs). I said what, dressed like this! It ended up being a 350-day shoot of which we were there the entire time. He did do a lot of takes. We averaged 30 takes per shot, and he would always say 'do it just like that again.' I said 'why do we have to keep redoing it if I do it just like that.' I said, 'come around the camera and you do it, and I'll do it just like you.' At one point we got called by the IRA that I had to leave the country for specific time before I could return. I told Kubrick had I known that I would've called them earlier.

Ryan remembers things Kubrick wanted. "Stanley begged us to never talk about him. Never set at those roundtables and talk to people like you. He was protective of his privacy. We didn't have a still photographer on set, a PR person, stand-ins, he was very practical. One of my favorite of his films, which I watched this morning again, was Lolita, it was definitely ahead of its time."

The documentary includes comments from Kubrick's wife as well as many prominent directors and actors. Vincent D'Onofrio, actor in Full Metal Jacket said, "Kubrick said be yourself, but in Full Metal Jacket he wanted me to be big like Lon Chaney.

Steven Spielberg once visited Kubrick at his home in England and was amazed that they spent the entire time in the kitchen.

Bentley's Story...

"My name is BENTLEY, and I'm a Great Dane who's also a great dog! I'm still a pup at 11 months old, but I'm already waist high to most adults. Everyone here at the El Cajon Animal Shelter agrees that I'm a very good boy with an affectionate and sweet disposition. I love everyone, and I'd need to be around people. I'm a big boy who needs to be taught to not jump on or lean on people, so I should go to either an adult home, or one where the kids are older and bigger. I'll do best in a home where I can understand my position in the pack, so I'll need a calm, firm leader. That way, we'll all be happy. I like other dogs, but I should only play with bigger dogs. I know the commands "sit" and "lie down." I still need to learn my house training skills, but I'm a smart dog who's ready to learn. I know in my heart that I'm going to make someone very happy, and that I'm a diamond in the "ruff." I'd love for you to come visit me here at the shelter. They've got a nice play yard here where we can spend some time together. Just ask one of our helpful staff to take me out, then you'll get to experience my charming nature firsthand. I am already neutered, purebred, and up to date with shots. Love, Bentley" Kennel #64
